Notes on Design

Dear Friends,

Time keeps flying faster- we are almost finished with 2008! Thanks to each of you for your support and friendship. This year was one of Insite Interiors most exciting and successful years ever. I could not have done it without you. As always, I work mostly on referral and appreciate each time you pass my name along to someone who may need interior design consultation or home furnishings.

Looking forward to next year, I see people getting back to basics in design and in function. I think more people will decide to improve the spaces they already occupy and be more thoughtful on how they spend money and resources. I've always promoted practicality, but firmly believe you can still do it with style. Don't let the economy blues keep you from loving the interiors you live in!

Wishing you the best in 2009. Have a safe and blessed holiday.

Warmest Regards,
Sharon Allemong

Featured Project: Minneapolis SOHO Penthouse

This eclectic penthouse in the Warehouse District boasts a combination of styles, yet is truly reflective of it's owner. It is chic like James Bond, rough like Clint Eastwood and traditional like Henry the Eighth.

Chic & Contemporary: In the living room we incorporated a modern creme leather sectional with red leather chairs framed in brushed steel to accent the sleek lines of the kitchen and wine bar. In the master bedroom, a custom bed with a large upholstered headboard makes a dramatic statement between the mirrored nightstands

Rough & Industrial: Reclaimed wood floors, old clay brick walls and antique retro-fitted doors serve as the foundation for a rustic feel in the main area. Industrial furnishings like the swivel barstools and old cart-turned-cocktail table seem to be left from the building's previous life as a factory.

Traditional & Grand: In the study, a black velvet camel back sofa sits on an oriental rug. A carved demi-lune bookcase stands tall in the corner opposite the ornately detailed chair & ottoman.

Client Craig Kruckeberg said of his project: "The amazing thing about working with Sharon is she took my vision and made it a reality...I had multiple ideas and only one condo...She gave me all of them. I love showing it off!"
